This is a fairly strenuous walk, involving one steep hill and certain paths could be slippery after wet weather. We would advise sturdy footwear for this walk. You will use pavements, field tracks, bridleways and woodland paths. This walk takes you to the River Orwell shores with picturesque views and would be an excellent walk for bird lovers as so many can be spotted at Loompit Lake. You could break your journey half way at The Harbourside Kitchen with lovely views over the river.

① From the village sign, take the High Road north. Go past Trimley Memorial Hall and The Trimley Sports and Social Club on your left. Then pass High Hall Close and the Hand in Hand pub on your right. A little further on, also on your right is Trimley Methodist Church on the corner of Mill Lane. On your left are two wooden houses, reported to be some of the oldest in the village. A few metres from these is Grimston Lane. Go just past this to the island refuge and cross the road. Go back to Grimston Lane.

② Turn right here. The second cottage on the right is Owl Cottage, another old property. Where the pavement ends is a STOP sign.

③ Bear right to the level crossing. The road is signed as Thorpe Lane. Go over the level crossing.

⑤ Take this public footpath on your left which goes towards a copse. Follow the path over the field and you will come to an area known as Fisherman’s Lakes, which is private. Continue along this path which goes past a field on your right with animals often grazing in it. The footpath eventually rejoins Thorpe Lane.

⑥ Bear right into Thorpe Lane and around a metal gate. The lane now becomes a bridleway called Goslings Track. This is named after Goslings Farm on your left. As you walk along the track you will have lovely views of the River Orwell over to your right.

⑨ Continue on the footpath through the wood. There are two parallel paths through some of the wood, as the lower path can get quite muddy. They will merge together so it doesn't matter which you take. As you go through the woods, you will see Suffolk Yacht Harbour or Levington Marina as most people call it on your left. The official path continues through the wood until it joins a tarmac road.

⑩ Turn away from the marina and right up the tarmac road, passing The Harbourside Kitchen on your right.

⑪ About half a mile up the road is a post with an RSPB Farmland bird sign. (If you have walked to the end of a wood on your left up the tarmac road you have gone too far.) Turn right into the farm track here which goes through fields.

⑫ At the brow of the hill, Fire Hill, there is a finger post sign showing the public footpath directly ahead. The path, known as Morston Hall Track goes into a dip with a steep rise the other side (slippery in wet weather). The track goes past a wood on your right and then emerges through farm buildings of Morston Hall. Keep following the clear public footpath signs through the farm buildings until you get to a metal gate. Walk around this and the track eventually emerges on to Morston Hall Lane.

⑮ At the bottom of the track, it goes over a stream and in front of you is a house called The Pump House converted from an old pumping station. Turn left here along a narrow track alongside the property and small woodland. You can see fishing lakes on your left as you walk up the track which can be wet after heavy rain. The footpath emerges into Thorpe Lane. Turn left and walk a short distance until you come to a footpath to your left.

⑯ Either retrace your steps along the footpath beside the fishing lakes to ⑤ then turn right along the path by the railway and make your way to ④. This is the safest route. Alternatively continue right along Thorpe Lane, taking great care of traffic as you go round the corner.

⑰ At the next corner is a cul-de-sac to your right, One of these cottages is known locally as the Plague Cottage. The road bends to the left. Continue along Thorpe Lane until you reach ④ and then retrace your steps over the level crossing and on to Grimstone Lane at ③. Continue to the end of the road and at ② turn left on to the High Road and cross over by the central refuge, turn right and make your way back to the village sign.
